

The heatmap displays a sparse distribution of values across a 10x10 grid. The background is black, and the data is represented by colored squares. The colors range from yellow (low intensity) to red (high intensity). The pattern is concentrated in the upper-left quadrant, with a small cluster of red squares near the top center and a small cluster of yellow squares near the bottom left.